A MESSAGE FOR SCHOOL STAFF MEMBERS

On behalf of the NAEP project team, I want to thank you and other members of your school system for agreeing to participate in the NAEP assessment. Your participation is essential and valued. NAEP's benchmark data about student achievement and instructional emphases are widely used for staff development, curriculum planning, and research on student performance. Your voluntary assistance enhances a cooperative partnership with school leaders across the country who believe that information about this nation's educational progress is a critical ingredient for public and professional discussion about policy and direction. Your assistance also contributes to our success in measuring what students know and can do.

This demonstration booklet illustrates the kinds of exercises or test questions and tasks used in the assessment of student achievement in reading and writing. Each student will be asked to complete the background section and the cognitive sections for one subject. The length of the assessment will require about 90 minutes of a student's time.

This booklet is divided into four parts. Part one contains the general background questionnaire that eighth graders will be asked to answer. The second and third parts contain descriptions of each assessment, followed by the booklet directions and the background questionnaire that accompanies each subject. Students will be asked such questions as their racial and ethnic background, parental education, and the number of educational materials in the home. This information is confidential. Students' names are removed from all completed assessment materials before they are shipped from the school to NAEP for processing.

Parts two and three also contain questions about specific subject matter that seek information, from the student's point of view, about how the subject matter is taught and the materials and resources the students use. There are also subject-specific samples of reading and writing questions that are representative of those in the assessment. Although the actual questions in the assessment must be safeguarded to maintain the integrity of the assessment and resulting data, the sample questions, nevertheless, are intended to convey the kinds of questions and question formats that are part of the assessment in 2002.

The fourth part of the booklet is located on the back cover and presents information about the program's purpose and what procedures to follow to obtain access to NAEP questions for further review.

Again, the project team appreciates your willingness to allow NAEP to conduct the assessment at your institution.

THE READING ASSESSMENT

The NAEP reading assessment measures students' ability to understand, to interpret, and to think critically about different types of texts. In responding to stories, articles, and documents, students are asked to read for literary experience, to gain information, and to perform a task. The assessment is comprised of reading materials selected from publications and other resources typically available to students in and out of school.

Across the three purposes for reading, students are asked to demonstrate their understanding by responding to comprehension questions that reflect four different types of reading processes. These processes represent the changing stances that a reader takes toward a text. Initial understanding questions ask students to consider the text as a whole. Developing an interpretation questions ask students to discern connections and relationships within the text. Personal reflection and response questions ask students to interpret the text in relation to their prior knowledge or experiences. Critical stance questions ask students to consider how the text is written.

The NAEP reading assessment contains multiple-choice questions as well as short and extended constructed-response questions. Students spend approximately 60 percent of their assessment time providing written answers to the constructed-response questions.

Each student who participates in the assessment will receive one test booklet. At grade 8, the booklets will contain either two 25-minute reading sections or one 50-minute section made up of reading materials and questions.

READING BOOKLET DIRECTIONS

In each of the next two sections, you will have 25 minutes to read a story, an article, or a document and answer questions about it. You should think carefully about your answers, and you should use the entire 25 minutes to complete each section.

You will be asked to respond to three different types of questions. Some of the questions will require you to choose the best answer and fill in the oval for that answer in your booklet.

For other questions, you will be asked to write short answers on the blank lines provided in your booklet. Here is an example of a question that requires you to provide a short answer.

Example 1

Give an example from the article that shows Mandy was not a quitter.

One example is that Mandy's mother didn't want her to umpire in public, but Mandy persuaded her mother to let her.

Also, you may be asked to answer other questions by writing longer, more detailed responses on a full page of blank lines. For example, here is a question that requires you to provide a longer answer.

Example 2

Explain how Mandy's mother and brother helped Mandy to become the first woman umpire.

Mandy's mother helped her by agreeing to let her umpire at a public ball game. Mandy did so well that the team offered her a job as umpire. Mandy's brother helped her by letting her play baseball with him. He also helped Mandy to persuade their mother to let her play in public.

When you are asked to write your response be sure that your handwriting is clear. Think carefully about each question and make your answers as complete as possible, using as many lines as you need.

You may go back to the story, article, or document when answering any of the questions. If you finish before time is called, be sure to read your work again and change anything that you think will make your answers better.

GARY SOTO

A FIRE IN MY HANDS

Gary Soto decided to become a poet in college after reading a bittersweet poem by Edward Field called "Unwanted." "It's about a lonely man who feels sad that no one wants him," Soto says. "He hangs a picture of himself at the post office next to the posters of dangerous criminals, hoping that people will recognize him and love him. I was inspired by this poem because it seemed to speak about my own life."

Later, Soto came upon a book of odes by Pablo Neruda, the Chilean poet who celebrated the beauty and value of common objects, such as socks, scissors, and watermelons. When Soto began writing poems himself, he focused on ordinary things from his childhood: his baseball mitt, dogs, and fruit. Here, for example, is a poem about young love in which an ordinary orange becomes "a fire in my hands," a symbol of love and growing self-confidence.

ORANGES

The first time I walked
With a girl, I was twelve,
Cold, and weighted down
With two oranges in my jacket.
December. Frost cracking
Beneath my steps, my breath
Before me, then gone,
As I walked toward
Her house, the one whose
Porch light burned yellow
Night and day, in any weather.
A dog barked at me, until
She came out pulling
At her gloves, face bright
with rouge. I smiled,
Touched her shoulder, and led
Her down the street, across
A used-car lot and a line
Of newly planted trees,
Until we were breathing
Before a drugstore. We
Entered, the tiny bell
Bringing a saleslady
Down a narrow aisle of goods.
I turned to the candies
Tiered like bleachers,
And asked what she wanted—

Light in her eyes, a smile
Starting at the corners
Of her mouth. I fingered
A nickel in my pocket,
And when she lifted a chocolate
That cost a dime,
I didn't say anything.
I took the nickel from
My pocket, then an orange,
And set them quietly on
The counter. When I looked up,
The lady's eyes met mine,
And held them, knowing
Very well what I was all
About.

Outside,
A few cars hissing past,
Fog hanging like old
Coats between the trees.
I took my girl's hand
In mine for two blocks,
Then released it to let
Her unwrap the chocolate.
I peeled my orange
That was so bright against
The gray of December
That, from some distance,
Someone might have thought
I was making a fire in my hands.

In another poem, black hair symbolizes Soto's Mexican heritage, which in turn creates a bond between him and his baseball hero, Hector Moreno:

...When Hector lined balls into deep
Center, in my mind I rounded the bases
With him, my face flared, my hair lifting
Beautifully, because we were coming home
To the arms of brown people.

(from "Black Hair")

Soto's poems focus on places as well as objects. He explains, "I saw that our [American] poets often wrote about places where they grew up or places that impressed them deeply. James Wright wrote about Ohio and West Virginia, Philip Levine about Detroit, Gary Snyder about the Sierra Nevadas and about Japan, where for years he studied Zen Buddhism. I decided to write about the San Joaquin Valley, where my hometown, Fresno, is located. Some of my poems are stark observations of human violence—burglaries, muggings, fist-fights — while others are spare images of nature—the orange groves and vineyards, the Kings River, the bogs, the Sequoias. I fell in love with the valley, both its ugliness and its beauty, and quietly wrote poems about it to share with others."

...And this morning
After the wind left
With its pile of clouds
The broken fence steamed, sunlight spread
Like seed from one field
To another, out of a bare sycamore
Sparrows lifted above the ridge...

(from "October")

Each poem comes from Soto's memory of a particular event. Using all five senses, he recreates the memory and expands on it with the imagination. "Narrative poems should be credible," he explains, "though they do not necessarily have to be completely 'true'." In fact, some of Soto's best poems, like the one that follows, are inventions based on someone he's seen or met.

FINDING A LUCKY NUMBER

When I was like you I crossed a street
 To a store, and from the store
 Up an alley, as I rolled chocolate
 In my mouth and looked around
 With my face. The day was blue
 Between trees, even without wind,
 And the fences were steaming
 And a dog was staring into a paint bucket
 And a Mexicano was raking
 Spilled garbage into a box,
 A raffle of eggshells and orange peels.
 He nodded his head and I nodded mine
 And rolled chocolate all the way
 To the courthouse, where I sat
 In the park, with a leaf falling
 For every person who passed—
 Three leaves and three daughters
 With bags in their hands.
 I followed them under trees,
 The leaves rocking out of reach
 Like those skirts I would love

From a distance. I lost them
 When I bent down to tie my shoes
 And begged a squirrel to eat grass.
 Looking up, a dog on the run,
 A grandma with a cart,
 And Italians clicking dominoes
 At a picnic table—men
 Of the Old World, in suits big enough
 For Europe. I approached
 Them like a squirrel, a tree
 At a time, and when I was close
 Enough to tell the hour from their wrists,
 One laughed with hands in his hair
 And turned to ask my age.
 “Twelve,” I said, and he knocked
 My head softly with a knuckle:
 “Lucky number, Sonny.” He bared
 His teeth, yellow and crooked
 As dominoes, and tapped the front one
 With a finger. “I got twelve—see.”
 He opened wide until his eyes were lost
 In the pouches of fat cheeks,
 And I, not knowing what to do, looked in.

Fifteen years ago, when he first started writing, Gary Soto had no idea that he would turn out so many poems. Yet poems feed into other poems, a process he compares to needle passing a stitch through cloth. He already has five books of poetry to his credit as well as four collections of essays. A collection of short stories for Chicano children, Baseball in April, will be published in February, and a collection of autobiographical essays, A Summer Life, will come out in June.

In the writing classes he teaches at the University of California at Berkeley, Soto advises his students to look to their own lives for inspiration. “What are your life stories?” he asks. “Can you remember incidents from your childhood? Some of you will say that your lives are boring, that nothing has happened, that everything interesting happens far away. Not so. Your lives are at work, too. Each poet works differently. But the task is always the same—to get the language right so that the subject of the poem will live.”

THE WRITING ASSESSMENT

The NAEP writing assessment measures three purposes of writing: narrative, informative, and persuasive. The narrative tasks comprise first-person and third-person fictional stories. The informative tasks comprise description, explanation, and analysis. The persuasive tasks comprise writing to convince, writing to construct an argument, and writing to refute a position.

Across the three purposes for writing, students are asked to respond in a variety of forms. These forms include essays, letters, reports, stories, and articles. Some tasks require students to write for a specified audience; for example, to a teacher, to a committee, or to a friend. Writing tasks in the 2002 assessment incorporate an array of stimulus materials, such as color photographs, comic strips, newspaper articles, and poems.

Each student participating in the assessment will receive one test booklet. At grade 8, students will receive two 25-minute writing tasks. All booklets contain a Planning Page, thus providing students with the opportunity to make notes and organize their ideas. In addition, all participating students are provided with a writing strategies brochure to remind them of various ways to plan and review their writing.

WRITING BOOKLET DIRECTIONS

Your book has 4 sections. Sections 1 and 2 each contain one writing assignment. You will have 25 minutes to complete each assignment. Sections 3 and 4 contain questions about you and your classes. The administrator will tell you when to begin and end each section.

In section 1 and in section 2, read the page that gives the assignment for the paper you will write. After reading the assignment, go on to the planning page where you can make notes and plan what to write. Do not write your paper on the planning page. After the planning page, there are lined pages where you should write your paper.

The following example shows what these pages look like.

Remember to start writing your papers on the lined pages that begin on page 4 of each section that has a writing assignment.

Read each assignment carefully so that you understand what you are to write about. For each writing assignment, you will probably need the entire 25 minutes to plan and write. Use as many lined pages as you need to write your paper. You may want to use ideas from the brochure you have been given to help you plan and review your paper.

If you finish before time is called, read your paper again and make any changes that you think will make it better.

Do not go past the  sign at the end of each section until you are told to do so.

WRITING QUESTIONS

Imagine that you are now 70 years old and it is almost the middle of the twenty-first century. Your grandchildren enjoy hearing stories about some of the amusing, interesting, or special things that happened to you when you were young.

Write a story for your grandchildren, describing something amusing, interesting, or special that happened to you when you were young.

Recently, the music industry started to put rating labels on record albums, compact discs, and tapes. These labels describe the content and language of the music. A local committee is considering a rating-label law that would make it illegal for anyone under the age of 18 to buy recordings with negative ratings.

Write a letter to the committee telling whether or not you think that negative rating labels should be used to restrict teenagers from buying certain music. Give specific reasons to support your opinion.

National Assessment of Educational Progress
2002 Assessment
Reading and Writing

Information About National Assessment of Educational Progress

PROJECT MISSION. NAEP is authorized by Congress and directed and funded by the U.S. Department of Education (National Center for Education Statistics) to report on what American students know and can do in key academic subjects. It has produced more than 200 reports in its 32-year history, chronicling trends over time in the performance of 9-, 13-, and 17-year-old and fourth-, eighth-, and twelfth-grade students. The results are reported in the aggregate for large groups; no student or school data are reported. Information is reported by average proficiency; racial/ethnic and gender status; region; type of school; parents' education level; teachers' emphases; and a variety of home and school supports for learning. It is important to note that student participation is voluntary and confidential.

THE CONTENT OF NAEP. By law, for each subject assessed, the National Assessment Governing Board (NAGB) manages the development of frameworks detailing what students reasonably might be expected to know and do. These frameworks are the "blueprints" for developing tasks that measure the content specified. Schools selected for the 2002 assessment will receive NAEP's frameworks for reading and writing. For information on additional framework development, please contact Mary Crovo of the National Assessment Governing Board at 202-357-6941.

EXAMINATION OF SECURE NAEP ITEMS. Within the limits of staff and resources, procedures have been developed that will enable small groups of members of the public to review the NAEP questions that will be administered in 2002. These arrangements must be made in advance of the local administration date(s) so that sufficient materials can be available and interested persons can be notified about the location and time of the examination. Those persons reviewing the assessment may not, however, remove the booklets from the room, copy them, or take notes. These requests may be made to the NAEP data collection staff or by contacting the National Center for Education Statistics at 202-502-7300.

OBTAINING NAEP QUESTIONS. Most NAEP questions and tasks are not generally released to the public, because these materials are reused in future assessments, and thus must be kept secure if the project is to accurately report trends in academic performance. However, a portion of each assessment is designated for public release and each NAEP report contains a sample of actual test questions. The questions released for public and research use can be obtained from the National Center for Education Statistics, NAEP Released Exercises, 1990 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006. Also, previously released questions may be viewed on and downloaded from the NCES Web site at <http://nces.ed.gov/nationsreportcard>.
