What are NAEP survey questionnaires?

NAEP survey questionnaires are voluntarily completed by students, teachers, and principals who participate in a NAEP assessment. Student survey questionnaires take about 15 minutes to complete and are administered at the end of the NAEP assessment. Students may answer as many questions as they like and may skip any question by leaving a response blank. NAEP survey questionnaires provide valuable information about participating students’ educational experiences and opportunities to learn both in and out of the classroom.

NAEP survey questionnaires also collect information about a student’s race, ethnicity, socioeconomic status (defined broadly as one’s access to economic, social, and cultural resources), use of technology, and school climate.

In addition, approximately half of the questions reflect the subject of the NAEP assessment the student has completed.

How are NAEP survey questionnaires going to help my child or my child’s school?

Information collected from NAEP survey questionnaires can be used to contribute to decisions about education policy that may improve schools and promote student progress across the nation. Students’ responses help highlight what is needed to improve education across the country. Although results are not reported at the individual student or school level, information gathered from NAEP survey questionnaires provides important data and insight for educators, policymakers, and researchers to better understand the educational experiences and needs of students in the United States.

How is information collected by NAEP survey questionnaires going to be used?

Once NAEP survey questionnaires are completed, all individual student responses are combined and grouped by grade level and subject. The responses are assembled into reports that summarize NAEP survey questionnaire results, including insights about student group topics such as race/ethnicity, socioeconomic status, gender, disability, and English language learner status. The reports highlight information to describe general, reliable, and valid estimates of student knowledge and academic performance.

Responses are confidential and cannot be linked to any student’s identity or personal information. For further protection, information provided in the survey questionnaire is always handled according to federal standards and industry best practices.
